Last week, more than 300 business, tech, real estate and civic leaders attended the 4th annual LIC Summit hosted by the Long Island City Partnership, Modern Spaces and QNS Media. The day-long forum explored issues currently affecting LIC and issues that will shape the neighborhood's future as an economic driver for the region. Discussions covered how to knit the growing population and expanding businesses together, how to accommodate more space for innovation, tech and biosciences, how to create the right mix of retail, better connect people to cultural resources, facilitate job growth and encourage healthy living. Pictured above are speakers James Patchett, NYCEDC, Seth Pinsky, RXR, Carlo Scissura, NY Building Congress, Kathryn Wylde, Partnership for NYC, and Elizabeth Lusskin, president LIC Partnership.
